First Presbyterian Church to Celebrate Its Centennial.

Meeting of the Congregation to Be Held Te-night to Discuss Ways

A very important meeting of the session of the First Presbyterian Church will be held this evening. Its object will be means of the coming great centennial celebration of that church.

It has been known for some time that here would be a celebration of this kind, but there is a new proposition, which will be broached for the first time to-night. the first hundred years of the existence of the First Presbyterian Church. It has occurred to the officers of the the church, however, that the scope of the observance might be broadened and enlarged so as to make the coming celebration an event in which all the Presbyterian churches of this jurisdiction could be interested.

The First Church is the oldest Presbyterian organization in the city of Washington proper, the church of Georgetown alone antenating it in history.

It is expected that the Rev. Adolos Allen, co-pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, will attend a meeting of the Presbytery of this District, which will be convened in Warner Memorial Church on the 7th of October. It is also expected that be will be instructed by the meeting to-night to make the proposition at the Presbytery for a celebration which will include all the

Dr. Sunderland favors the celebration of the proposed grand scale and he spoke very interestingly on the subject to a Time reporter last night. In the talk he related the history of the church in a general way which will be found to be interesting in view of the celebration and a lso as a chapter of the ancient history of the city.

The nucleus of the present church on Four-and a half street, at which the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage will be co-pastor, was formed in a temporary building used by the carpenters who worked on the White House. The corner stone of the White House was laid in 1792 and it took ten years to complete it. When the carpenters began their part of the work they had their own quarters and as well as can be ascertained they formed a religious assembly of the Presby-terian faith in November, 1795. Their in the woods. This fact was humorously impressed on the mind of Mrs. President Adams, who in 1,800 words wrote to her sister from the White House that although they were in the middle of the woods she had some difficulty in getting wood to do the cooking. In those days also Mrs. Adams used to have her clothes lines stretched across the East room and on these were occasionally displayed the Presidential, male and female, garments to dry. It is supposed that these primitive good people also attended the carpenters' church in the shop in the woods. When the shop was torn down the con gregation used to worship in an old building which was used as a school house near the northeast corner of Tenth and F streets. After worshipping here for some time they moved into an old academy which stood pear the present site of the

The congregation of this chapel subse-quently sold it to a colored Methodist congregation, and in 1823 nearly three quarters of a century ago the foundations of the present Four-and-a-half Street Church were laid, one of the first pasters of the new church being the Rev William Post. The original binding was the present Sunday-school room. In 1859 the church was enlarged to its present propor-

In 1853 Dr. Sunderland became the pastor of the church. Most of the history of the old church has been collected by Dr Sunderland from people who were children at the time of the events he relates.

MAKING A MAGAZINE.

Eugene Camp, of New York, Describes

Mr. Eugene M. Camp, of New York, last night delivered an-lilustrated lecture at National Rifles' Armory on the "Making of a Modern Magazine," for the benefit of the industrial school for boys at Goodwill farm, Maine. A large and appreciative udience was present and manifested much nterest in Mr. Camp's talk.

The speaker was introduced by Gen. A. W. Greety, and his address embraced ow a magazine is illustrated, the electro typing and stereotyping, what is paid for irticles, the new type-setting machines the money value of news and stories, and oints about famous authors and artists.

The lecture was illustrated by means of stereopticon views. After the lecture there was an exhibition of rare literary curios, including rare, original manuscripts and drawings by Sir Walter Scott, Victor Hugo, Longfellow, Wilkie Colins, Charlet Dickens, Jean Ingelow, Mark Twain, Charles Reade, Thomas Hardy, George DuMaurier, Thomas Nast, Frederic Remington, James Russell Lowell, Napoleon, Queen Victoria and many others.

The industrial school which the proceeds of the lecture will help build is one that takes boys from New York, Philadelphia and Washington and gives them a Christian home and an education, thus furnishing them a chance to help themselves in the the Knights. MORTON CUTS AGAIN.

This Time He Lops Off the Special Agencies in Europe.

Secretary Morton has determined to dis ontinue the special agencies of the Agricultural Department in Europe. These were instituted by Secretary Rusk and had for their object the propagation of intelligence abroad regarding American food products and the securing of informa-tion concerning the obstacles which prevented the greater use and sale of American agricultural productions.

Some time ago Secretary Morton dis-barged Col. Murphy, who had been devoting his attention to introducing the use of Indian corn on the continent and in Great Britain. The Secretary has now prepared a letter to Special Agent John Mattes, jr., who is at present located in Germany, announcing that, after December 1, his services will no longer be required by the government.

There are three carloads of scenery, cos-tumes, properties and machinery used in the big production, and most of it is already in Washington, ready-to be put upon the stage

All this lot of baggage has been sent on shead in order that everything may be pre-pared for the special scenic rehearsal the night before the theater opens. Miss Russell bstituted another opera for "The Tzig-e" during the last week of her engagement in Boston for the express purpose of getting "The Tzigane" stuff all in place and in practicable working order before the com-pany arrives. Miss Russell herself and the hundred other people who belong to the Lill-ian Russell Opera Company will get here Sunday afternoon by special train in time for a rehearsal with the big orchestra of wenty-five pieces which Manager Albaugh has engaged for the opera season.

The advance sale of seats and boxes for the opening performance at the Lafayette square will begin to-morrow morning at Metzerott's music store. The prices range from $2 to 50 cents for sents and from $15 to $10 for boxes.
